MWA commends the efforts of the students of the Sydney University encampment

As an Australian Muslim women's organisation dedicated to justice for over 40 years, MWA is immensely proud of and stands in solidarity with the students of the University of Sydney Palestine encampment.

We commend the courage, tireless efforts and conviction of the students who advocated for justice, negotiating with university leadership for disclosure and divestment, and continuing the encampment through many difficult and challenging circumstances.

The actions of the students for over two months highlight not just the importance of standing up for truth, justice and freedom, but they are also a powerful demonstration that a way rooted in compassion, equity, and humanity is not only possible but necessary.

The unwavering commitment of our youth has affirmed and contributed to the global call and awakening for justice. We are extremely proud of the way in which our youth are engaging with institutions such as universities, and holding them to account with integrity and dignity.
